

Washington Beech

Boston, MA

PROJECT DESCRIPTION

The project involved the redevelopment of the 1950s-era Washington Beech public housing property in Boston's Roslindale community. This HOPE VI revitalization project is designed to replace 266 units of deteriorated public housing with newly built affordable rental and homeownership units on a reconfigured street layout. The phase receiving HIT financing involves the construction of 56 affordable townhouse-style and one-level rental units in seven buildings. The new design will feature open areas and green space for playgrounds and other recreational activities.

HIT ROLE

The HIT was part of a public/private partnership financing the redevelopment of the Washington Beech public housing property. The HIT worked with the Boston Housing Authority, MassHousing, and developer Trinity Financial, Inc., to provide $13.5 million in financing for this $26 million phase of the project. The investment is part of the HIT's Massachusetts Housing Initiative through which it is working closely with MassHousing to help increase affordable housing in the state.

SOCIAL IMPACT

The Washington Beech project is helping revitalize a valuable affordable housing resource for residents of Boston's Roslindale community. It will give the aging development a new design that reduces density, provides a variety of unit types and green spaces, and integrates more smoothly into the surrounding neighborhood. Units are designed using green principles and technology to increase energy efficiency and provide a healthier living environment for residents.

The project is generated approximately 145 union construction jobs for members of the local building and construction trades unions.
